Curlew Lake State Park

Welcome to Curlew Lake State Park

Curlew Lake State Park is a relaxing camping park on the shores of 5.5 mile-long Curlew Lake in northeast Washington. The 123-acre park, with its green lawns and shade trees, offers beautiful lake vistas of pine-covered hills for visitors who enjoy the warm summer days and cool summer nights.

An area of the park once was a summer camp for Native American tribes in the region; discoveries include an indigenous people's pestle and the discarded shells of freshwater clams near an ancient fire ring.

The park offers a variety of recreational activities, from bird-watching, wildlife watching and fishing, to boating, canoeing, kayaking, hiking, swimming and picnicking.

The park also has a putting green. In the community nearby, visitors can take advantage of activities including fossil digging at Stone Rose, gold-panning, a nine-hole golf course, antique stores, the Ferry County Fair and seasonal festivals. To the north in Canada, tours, festivals and more outdoor recreation opportunities are available.

Plant and animal life flourish throughout the park:
